16a. Which one of the following health care plans would you favor more? (ROTATE ORDER ON EVERY OTHER INTERVIEW.)

A congressional plan that is less expensive than the Clinton plan because it relies on competitive buying of insurance and does not require businesses to pay for their employees' coverage, but that might leave more than ten million Americans without coverage.

OR

President Clinton's health care plan, which may cost more than the congressional plan, but provides more benefits and cost controls, requires businesses to pay for their employees' coverage, and guarantees coverage for every American.

Now, I would like to describe some of the different health care plans and get your opinion.

(The Clinton Plan)***

16b. Plan A would guarantee a standard package of health benefits to all American citizens, in which insurance companies would continue to provide health insurance coverage, with some government regulation to keep costs under control and to promote competition, and in which all employers would be required to provide health insurance for their workers, with government subsidies to help small employers. Does this plan have a great deal of appeal to you, some appeal, just a little appeal, or no appeal at all?

16c. Plan B would require the government to collect taxes from businesses and individuals and to use the money to repay citizens for most medical expenses and to control the cost of medical services, without the involvement of employers or insurance companies. Does this plan have a great deal of appeal to you, some appeal, just a little appeal, or no appeal at all?

(The Chafee Plan)***

- 16d. Plan C would make the government require all individuals to have health insurance--similar to the requirement for all car owners to have auto insurance--and low-income people would receive government financial assistance to help them pay for their coverage. Does this plan have a great deal of appeal to you, some appeal, just a little appeal, or no appeal at all?

(The Cooper Plan)***

- 16e. Plan D would require all employers to offer a standard health benefits package without requiring them to pay any part of the costs, would try to control costs by promoting market competition among insurance companies without government price controls, and would not guarantee coverage for every American. Does this plan have a great deal of appeal to you, some appeal, just a little appeal, or no appeal at all?
